Hemorrhoids: Care Instructions

Your Care Instructions:

Hemorrhoids are enlarged veins that develop in the anal canal. Bleeding during bowel movements, itching, swelling, and rectal pain are the most common symptoms. They can be uncomfortable at times, but hemorrhoids rarely are a serious problem.

You can treat most hemorrhoids with simple changes to your diet and bowel habits. These changes include eating more fiber and not straining to pass stools. Most hemorrhoids do not need surgery or other treatment unless they are very large and painful or bleed a lot.

Follow-up care is a key part of your treatment and safety. Be sure to make and go to all appointments, and call your doctor if you are having problems. It's also a good idea to know your test results and keep a list of medicines you take.

How Can You Care For Yourself At Home?

- Sit in a few inches of warm water (sitz bath) two times a day and after bowel movements. The warm water helps with pain and itching.
- Put ice on your anal area several times a day for 10 minutes at a time. Put a thin cloth between the ice and your skin. Follow by placing a warm, wet towel on the area for another 10 to 20 minutes.
- Take pain medicines exactly as directed:
 - If the doctor gave you a prescription medicine for pain, take as prescribed.
 - If you are not taking a prescription pain medicine, ask your doctor if you can take an over-the-counter medicine.
- Keep the anal area clean, but be gentle. Use water and a fragrance-free soap, such as Ivory, or use baby wipes or medicated pads, such as Tucks.
- Wear cotton underwear and loose clothing to decrease moisture in the anal area.
- Eat more fiber. Include foods such as whole-grain breads and cereals, raw vegetables, raw and dried fruits, and beans.
- Drink plenty of fluids, enough so that your urine is light yellow or clear like water. If you have kidney, heart, or liver disease and have to limit fluids, talk with your doctor before you increase the amount of fluids you drink.
- Use a stool softener that contains bran or psyllium. You can save money by buying bran or psyllium (available in bulk at most health food stores) and sprinkling it on foods or stirring it into fruit juice. Or you can use a product such as Metamucil.
